Ford Says Auto Sales Far from Saturation Point

Looks for Good Business During Year; Believes Stock Market Crash Will Bring More Creative Work in Industry of World

BY JAMES L. KILGALLAN
(Copyright, 1930, by J.L.K.S.)
FORT MYERS, Fla., Feb. 15.—Henry Ford, asked today, in an exclusive interview with International News Service, whether he thinks that 1930 will be a good business year, replied:

"The surface of the earth has not been scratched yet in the sale of automobiles. Every country needs them. No country can do without them. Transportation is the life of everything. We expect this to be a good year in our business."

Asked his reaction to the Wall Street market crash, Mr. Ford replied:

"It took a lot of good men temporarily out of business. I mean to say that the heads of industries became interested in speculation. It took their minds off creative work. Now their minds are back on business but it is a question whether their business minds are as good as they were. Too many of them are thinking of the millennium, or easy street, or what might have been if the market staged up."

Mr. Ford said if the "business men" who got caught in the stock market drop so low to work with the idea in mind of being of service to the world—rather than concentrating on accumulating money quickly and easily—they will be on the right road. For, in his opinion, the only way to true success is by giving service.

Lacks Market Knowledge
"Do you think guys could be taken to prevent a recurrence of the market break?" he was asked.

"I don't know anything about the stock market," Mr. Ford confessed.

"I do believe, however, that when the people generally speculate in stocks in a substantial way it costs everybody money. Too much speculation is a bad thing."

"The only stock Mr. Ford thinks is 'worth a continental' is 'brains,' and, he added, 'more brains are being rewarded by the striving for money than for any other thing.'"

Mr. Ford smiled when asked if he thought the powerful banks had done the right thing in coming to the assistance of the market during the chaotic days of last fall. He said:

"The bankers created the situation that developed and had to prolong it as long as possible to make out

GET MARRIED, IS ADVICE OF FORD

FORT MYERS, Fla., Feb. 15.—Henry Ford, one of America's most successful men, was asked today how much of his success he attributed to Mrs. Ford, and his reply was this:

"No man can expect to be anything or get anywhere unless he has a good wife. There are so many problems that come up in a man's life that require a woman's assistance."

"One of the first aims of a young man out of school who has learned a trade should be to get married. If he truly aims to be of service to the world he will have no difficulty in finding the right young lady as a helpmate."

the money they could. Why shouldn't they have saved in the crisis? They were merely giving the market a little more manipulation."

"The public made the mistake, but the other fellows included it. When a man buys stock he should understand he is not making an investment but is taking a risk."

Ford's Mass Production

Mr. Ford made it evident he is strongly in favor of mass production. He said there has been talk of curtailing farm production so the price could be advanced but, he believes such a policy would be "dead wrong." He related how in the early stages of the automobile industry the sum of $300,000, then considered an enormous amount, was spent in successfully building the Model T. He said the plan, the lack of which was to curtail the production and regulate the price of cars which would have killed off competition and prevented the growth of the automotive industry to its present stupendous proportions.

"It is unnatural to curtail production of anything, whether it is a manufactured product or whether it is a product of the soil," declared Mr. Ford. "Any plan to manipulate conditions and retard production is inadvisable if not ruinous."

"We read much about farm relief. There is only one way to bring about farm relief and that is through quantity production, of a good quality. You will always find a market no matter how heavy production becomes because chemists, scientists and manufacturers of all kinds will find a way to use any first class crop that is cheap."

He cited the railroads as having a policy of "trying to get all the traffic will bear" and such a policy, he contended, has been detrimental to the railroad business. He believes that the people generally feel that railroad fares and freight rates are out of proportion to other businesses, to the detriment of the railroad owners themselves.

Will Always Be Good

"Business will always be good once people get the idea of service to one another rather than striving to make money," Ford said. "And there will be no lack of employment, once the people realize the benefits to be derived from mass production."

This is "the age of machines," according to Mr. Ford. He believes the mechanization of industry has not only taken a load off the shoulders of man but has raised man to a higher level.

"Machines eliminate drudgery," Mr. Ford said. "Men are making and directing the machines instead of doing the drudgery. They are being paid better, too, and stronger as it may seem to some, the more machines in operation the more men at work."

"There are more men working today by 50 per cent than at any time in the history of the world and the standard of the worker has been raised to a much higher level."

Little Sandusky Man Dies After Being Struck by Car

JOHN B. HILL, 77, ACCIDENT VICTIM

Steps Out of Way of One Car into Path of Another

EXONERATE DRIVER

Aged Man Buried at Old Home in West Jefferson

UPPER SANDUSKY, Feb. 17.—John B. Hill, 77, father of Mrs. Samuel West, of Little Sandusky, was fatally injured at Little Sandusky, Saturday evening at 6 o'clock, when he was struck by an automobile driven by Ralph Wenzandy, of this city.

Mr. Hill had made his home with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. West, for the past two years, and had just returned with them from a visit to West Jefferson, his old home town. At the time of the accident he was walking from the West home to a store in Little Sandusky. Mr. West was watching, as he was walking down the left side of the road toward the store, an auto driven by Miss Louise Walter, of this city, was coming from the south and the roadster driven by Mr. Wenzandy, was coming south. It is believed he became confused and crossed to the west side of the road stopping directly in front of the Wenzandy car. The accident happened directly in front of the Little Sandusky church. Mr. West and Elmer Schuster, who lives nearby, removed Mr. Hill to the West home and Dr. Frederick Kopan, of this city, was called but Mr. Hill died soon after the doctor's arrival without regaining consciousness.

His left leg was broken below the knee and his head badly bruised and lacerated. He probably suffered internal injuries also.

Mr. Wenzandy was driving slowly and the accident was unavoidable. He has been exonerated of all blame.

Mr. Hill was removed to West Jefferson in the Blosser and Vance ambulance of that place. Funeral services were held this afternoon and burial was made there.

Mr. Hill was born at West Jefferson Apr. 27, 1855. His wife died about 27 years ago. Besides one daughter, Mrs. Lucy Camp, of Columbus, he was employed in the bank at West Jefferson for 15 years and later followed the occupation of insurance salesman. After leaving West Jefferson he went to Seattle to reside with a son, but made his home at Little Sandusky since his son's death two years ago.

This makes the third person to be killed while walking along the Marion-Upper Sandusky road at Little Sandusky in the past few years.

LABOR DEMANDS AID IN CHICAGO CRISIS

Federation Calls on State Legislature for Special Session

CHICAGO, Feb. 17.—With the Chicago Federation of Labor demanding a special session of the state legislature to provide relief for the thousands of jobless city and county employees, Chicago today was apparently no nearer a solution to the tangled financial snarl than it was yesterday.

At a stormy meeting the labor group demanded that the state legislature should provide relief for the thousands of jobless city and county employees. The administration of Mayor William Hale Thompson was again accused of parsimony withholding funds with which the workers could be paid.

Stories of desperation were told by city, county and school board employees, some of whom have gone without pay checks for more than six weeks.

Gov. Louis Emmerson was called upon to convene a special session of the legislature for the purpose of a thorough inquiry into affairs and immediate relief.

Although merchants have refused to honor the paper as currency, Cook county today was preparing to issue $500,000 worth of tax warrants or bills to its employees. Distribution will take place tomorrow, provided the employees accept the paper.

County officials were told by bankers that even if the workers find buyers for the tax warrants they probably will have to take a 10 per cent discount in cashing the paper.

Sissons, Zohreris, who was once committed to the Lancaster industrial school, will be returned to Cleveland by juvenile authorities.

Assistant Cashier Bound and Gagged by Two Young Gunmen

WILMINGTON, Feb. 17.—Two young and shabbily-dressed masked bandits entered the Port William National bank at Port William village, near here, held up and bound Assistant Cashier James S. Young, the only employee in the bank at the time, and escaped with $2,000 in cash shortly before noon today.

The two men had handcuffs over the lower part of their faces. Young was in the rear of the bank and heard the men enter, but said that he paid no particular attention at first, as he was busy and thought they were customers. Cashier D. E. Deal had left the bank but a few minutes before the robbery.

One of the bandits pulled out a gun and commanded Young to "Stick 'em up." The other robber went to a cash drawer where he obtained $1,700 and loaded an unloaded safe of $300 more.

RAID HOTEL, ARREST SCORES OF PERSONS

3 Policemen in Plain Clothes Swoop Down on Philadelphia Hostelry

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 17.—The arrest of more than a score of business men and their wives on charges of illegal possession of liquor while attending a party Sunday at the Benjamin Franklin hotel here caused a sensation in exclusive hotel and club circles today.

The raid, conducted by 30 policemen in plain clothes, took place while a party being held in two suites on the fourth floor was at the height of its gaiety. Two detectives who registered under fictitious names at the well known hostelry had tipped off the raiders.

Eleven of the prisoners were women. All were herded into four patrol wagons and rushed to the Central police station.

About 10 quarts of whisky and gin, a number of empty bottles, cracked ice and sugar also were seized, police said.

The hotel management in a formal statement charged the police conducted the raid without warrants and that the detectives violated the Pennsylvania state hotel code by registering under fictitious names and failing to protest to the hotel management.

The raid, it was learned today, was made at the specific request of L. L. Schofield, director of public safety, who threatens to make similar raids on other of the city's prominent hotels if their officials "continue to refuse to cooperate with him in the enforcement of prohibition."

DISAPPEARANCE OF STUDENT Baffles

Police Fear Campbell Youth Took Life After Dismissal from College

ATHENS, Feb. 17.—The mystery of the strange disappearance of George Kendall of Campbell, O., dismissed Ohio university sophomore, who vanished six days ago, still was baffling county authorities here today. Some of the officials, who have expressed the belief that the youth committed suicide by drowning, directed their search to the Hoeking river again, in hope of solving the mysterious disappearance.

It is believed that the boy took drastic measures to end his own life after he had been notified by university officials that he had been dismissed from the school because of failure in his studies.

He was last seen the night of Feb. 11, by his roommate, Michael O'Malley, also of Campbell, a suburb of Youngstown. The boy left his room without taking his hat or coat.

The youth's parents, at Campbell, notified authorities here that they have not received any word from him.

Thoughtfulness Distinguishes Our Service

THE distinguishing quality of the successful mortician is thoughtfulness. This thoughtfulness is manifest not only at the time of the funeral service, but in the facilities prepared in advance. Every desire of his clients must have been foreseen long before, and provided for. But such preparation is only possible against a background of long experience. Years of service must have taught the mortician these little ways so essential in adding to the comfort and convenience of those he is called upon to serve. Our service has had just such a background of experience. During the many years that we have been ministering to the needs of this community, we have acquired a fund of sympathy and understanding which enables us to fulfill the unspoken wishes of our clients.

An Investment that does not fluctuate in value— Life Insurance

OWNERS of life insurance have had occasion recently to compare the stability of this form of investment with that of even the highest grade securities.

A chart of the market price averages of leading stocks for twenty years shows an irregular line that rises and dips, sometimes vertically, with "peaks and valleys".

There are no "depressions" in the investment values of life insurance policies. They do not fluctuate with business cycles. From year to year, the 44 million Metropolitan Life Insurance policies show a steady increase in values to policy-holders.

The man who regularly invests part of his earnings in life insurance can go to sleep each night with the knowledge that he is building an estate of the greatest security and with a sure investment return for every dollar paid in.

Life insurance is an investment whose value constantly increases the longer it is kept in force.

Home Life Source of Hope for Future, Bishop Asserts

Edgar Blake, Methodist Official, Cites Responsibility of Parenthood in Address Here; Speaks at Wesley and Epworth Churches

A poem on motherhood and fatherhood was read at Wesley M. E. church when Bishop Edgar Blake, of Indianapolis, spoke there yesterday morning. Last night he was at Epworth M. E. church, preaching a sermon on the last about the last and the first.

The bishop is a short, slender, white-haired man, with a smile that belies his years of work in the ministry. A characteristic position when he is interested in his talk, he stands with arms akimbo, and sometimes lay before his audience something to give them food for thought.

Tells of Home Life

Jesus' home life, according to Bishop Blake, must have been a wonderful thing, and Joseph must have been a wonderful father for Jesus said, "God is like my father." And yet, the bishop went on to say, "No man ought to be the center of the household."

"There is only one center and that is the mother. The birth of Jesus to Mary was an act of God that linked motherhood to Godhead."

"We evangelists have been neglected of our home to Mary, and we have allowed our Catholic friends to monopolize her."

"Where did Jesus learn 'Love one another'?" That was not brought down out of the skies. It was something he saw in his own home. His mother had lived like that.

Bishop Blake declared that the first examples of unselfish love are in our homes—the mothers.

Concluding his sermon at Wesley church, Bishop Blake said: "I am building my hopes of tomorrow, not upon the schools, the White House, the legislatures, the churches—I am building them upon the homes of the common people of this land who still hold a faith that keeps them true to God, who live their lives in simplicity."

The bishop's talk in the morning was interspersed with colorful stories from real life. At the close of the service, Mrs. Blake, wife of Jan. 25, 1930, was introduced to the congregation.

Last night at Epworth church he made this statement: "A great many people consider justice along with business, but the sheep that is lost was a perfectly good sheep just strayed away and couldn't find its way back. A great many people are straying away, and it is difficult for them to get back to the fold."

Out of Circulation

"The lost coin is merely good money out of circulation," he said.

"The lost boy just deliberately went away. While he was away he lost everything except his father. The boy thought Marion was too small, and that he would go to Cleveland or Chicago where he could do the things he wanted to do. Because he could do this he went to the devil. When the boy finally came to his senses he went home and his father was ready to receive him."

NEWLY INVENTED SPARK PLUG BURNS 50% AIR

A wonderful new spark plug that has been recently invented. It eliminates all carbon and starts your automobile instantly in all kinds of weather giving it more speed, more power, quicker pick-up, greater smoothness and more miles per gallon, exceeding by far any other device ever heard of. There was never anything on the market like it before and there is no competition, for it is fully protected by patents. Its success is sensational.

Angus Spark Plug Co., Dept. D, 128 N. Wells St., Chicago, Illinois, is offering to send a set of these plugs to anyone on ten days free trial. Also ask for information as to how you can make $250.00 to $300.00 per month acting as local distributor in your territory.—Adv.

A family doctor's laxative is the sensible choice!

YOUR health is too important!

You can't afford experiments with your delicate bowels when a coated tongue, bad breath, gas, headaches, nausea, feverishness, biliousness, lack of appetite, and no energy, warn of constipation. This applies not only to grown people; it is particularly the case where young children are concerned.

That's why a family doctor's laxative is always the safe choice! Only a doctor knows just what will cleanse the system of men, women or children without harm.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is prepared today under strict supervision from freshest herbs and other pure ingredients, and exactly according to Dr. Caldwell's original prescription.

He was a family doctor for more than forty-seven years. He specialized in the disorders of the digestive tract. He tested this prescription in thousands of cases. Men liked its quick and thorough action; the children liked its pleasant taste; old people praised it because it never gripped.

Today, millions of families rely on Dr. Caldwell's judgment in the selection of their laxative. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is now sold in all drug stores. It is the world's largest selling laxative.

Drinking alcohol is actually good for the individual, Mrs. Warner said, but it is bad for society.

There are two kinds of drinkers: the impulsive and the thoughtful. The impulsive drinker is one who drinks for the sake of drinking, and the thoughtful drinker is one who drinks for the sake of the drink.

Mrs. Warner declared that the mind of the individual in intoxication is always accompanied by a feeling of pleasure and relief from

MOTHERS' HOPES

What Chance Have They if Real Music Must Be Sacrificed to Machine-made Sound?

MOTHERS strive valiantly to give their children happiness—a chance to enjoy the richest of lives. Contrary forces are at work to deprive them of this. The machine-made sound of the gramophone and the radio is a constant threat to the child's ear. The child's ear is a delicate instrument, and it is being ruined by the machine-made sound. DANDRUFF

A Sure Way to End It

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely, and that is to use it. This dandruff cream is so effective that it gets about four ounces of plain ordinary hand cream, apply it at night when no other things are enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single grain and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and itching of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better. You can get flippant, even at our drug store and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy never fails.—Advt.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the blood, attacks the root of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

Fat Folks Eat Less

Than the Thin

VERY often we find that fat people eat less than thin people. They are naturally careful in their diet. So it is evident, generally, that something else causes excess fat. There is usually an under-active gland. Modern physicians, in treating obesity, seek to supply the deficiency.

The factor they use is embodied in Marmola's prescription tablets. It largely explains the results. A book in each box of Marmola's gives the formula and states why it leads to reduction.

Marmola is prepared in a famous medical laboratory to deal with the way with excess fat. People have used it for 22 years—millions of boxes of it. They have sold the results to others, until people now employ it in a larger way than ever.

Do what those people have done. Don't starve, don't over-exercise. There is danger in both. Let Marmola supply the gland factor which is probably too scant. Watch the results for a little while, it lower weight, new health, and vitality. Those results will tell you if this is the right way for you.

Do this for your own sake, for your family and friends. If your condition is abnormal, correct it. Get your Marmola now. Marmola's prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $4 a box. Any druggist who is out will gladly order for you.

"Disraeli" Sale
of Seats Large

Success Seen for Show Sponsored by Club Federation

The advance seat sale for "Disraeli," the picture which will be shown at the Marion theater Wednesday and Thursday under auspices of the Marion County Federation of Women's clubs, promises for a successful enterprise.

George Arliss, who played the role of "Disraeli" for many years on the stage, has brought the character to the screen, with an even greater scope for his talents than the stage offered.

"Disraeli" is a talking picture of the highest type, one that the Federation has expressed itself as proud to sponsor. Among Arliss' most noted plays have been "Alexander Hamilton," "Old English," and "The Green Goddess."

An exact replica of a portion of the house of commons was built for the filming of the parliamentary scenes for the picture. One man has said of the set, "When this picture is shown in England, Londoners will think that these scenes are actually filmed in the house of commons, although they will at the same time know that this is absolutely impossible."

The meeting by the hostess and Mrs. Drake, on March 1, the club will meet with Mrs. J. G. Sutton, Congress st.

Full strength Listerine is an antiseptic because it is an active germicide, which attacks germ conditions that produce odor. Then, being a powerful deodorant it destroys the odor themselves. Even the scent of onion and fish yield to it.

A story of love and life in Hollywood. Andrew Kellors, bell to the door, asks Barbara Thornton if she has just lost her job. She agrees but not for the reason he thinks. madness. Need $5000 for machinery. Not an expert: have working model. Price only $3000, payable in installments, or would exchange for good business property. What have you?

John Andrew read this notice, told the newspaper into its original creases, and then, placing the paper on the seat next to him, he looked at it. He was looking at it with a certain interest. He was looking at it with a certain interest. He was looking at it with a certain interest.

But why talk about it? The thing now was to double five thousand dollars. "I don't believe in real estate," Kellors picked up a thread of conversation. "You know George Greer, who used to be with Hamilton, King & Co? Well, George bought a couple of lots way up in the hills five years ago. A lot couldn't get to eat no street work, no sewers, no lights, no beautification, no nothing, and George told me himself that he sold one for $5500 in February, and that it's changed hands twice, and has doubled in price. George says he's holding on to the rest and won't be gone until he gets the price for 'em."

First, John Andrew remembered, they took cigars, and now they were taking corner lots. The talk went into larger figures, and Kellors took no comfort from it. "I believe I'll take a sleep," he muttered; he had intended it as a jovial notice, but even to him there was no humor about it. Returning to his own car was more difficult than the earlier sun-up through the long, swaying train. John Andrew worked his way through the sleeper next to the obstruction car, and into the third from the rear of the train; he reached the dark, narrow passageway which led past the forward compartments and dressing room, flattened himself automatically against the side of the car so that the thin rack holding a hotel guide and time-tables pressed against his back, waiting for some fellow passenger to pass.

It was dim in the corridor, but as John Andrew waited, the train rushed past a small station, with an engine, headlight blazing, standing on a crossing; for the space of a click of the rails the passageway was illuminated brightly. John Andrew looked up automatically. He saw more curious color than he had ever seen in his life, all contained in one minute, changing to irregular patches of green, through which shot luminous silver streaks (searchlights, although John Andrew saw it only as a flash); there was ultramarine and autumn gold and, like the bursting of a rocket.

The small figure in the bright limelight had stopped also, but as the corridor became darker on her way toward the rear, continued on her way back to her berth; as she passed Kellors, he said happily, "Hello, I thought you'd missed the train."

The girl nodded imperceptibly, and went on, but as she passed John Andrew, he said, "Hello, I thought you'd missed the train."

"Nothing wrong with your taste in color, either," John Andrew said. Color indeed came flying to her cheeks as she said clearly, "These let me by."

John Andrew rested an elbow against the bars before the window, and then said, looking toward the window, "You haven't the best of memories, have you?"

"A very good one," the girl said. "I've never met you anywhere. Do you want me to call the conductor?"

"No," said John Andrew. "Don't. Confidentially, no girl goes around calling for help these days, do they?" He felt that he ought to place her in explanation, but could not resist saying, "You know who I am."

"Who?" Kellors asked.

"The prince of Wales," John Andrew announced in a husky whisper.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood
Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

YESTERDAY was Sunday, and the only Sunday I can remember that my aunt hasn't washed and me and Jubilee laid out in white when we were up and I was wondering if my aunt would be able to do her regular washing and ironing, and then I let Jubilee down and went down and done everything with two cows and a hard-headed father has to do, and then I went in and strained the milk and was feeding my face, and my mother had made some milk toast for me and I took it into her, and she looked at me from around her house and groaned, and my grandfather looked in and told her he had learned to the hospital for a trained nurse for her, and he said she would be sorry to learn that they only had a young man trained nurse that wasn't engaged, but he knew she wouldn't want a man, and she asked him why she wouldn't. She said men had girl nurses so why shouldn't a girl have a man nurse, and he said there were reasons but he couldn't think of them all right then. I wished he could. I would like to of heard them.

When I was feeding my face my grandfather got talking. He likes to tell folks how smart he is, and I found out he was only spoofing me, and he hadn't formed the hospital at all. And then my mother wondered if he hadn't better, and he said a nurse costs seven dollars a day, so then my mother said she was sure my aunt was better and a nurse wouldn't be needed.

Anyhow I got to wash myself for Sunday school, and I scribbled myself under than my aunt would've, because I wanted my mother and father to see that I could do it all right. So when I went in for my father to look me over like he told me to, he found some soap-suds behind my ears that I hadn't got to with the towel. So I let it all off.

That was Monday, and the doctor told me that she would soon be as well as even, so I ain't going to get to be a pallid barrier yet. My aunt ain't never done much for me, but I am one of the fellows that returns good for evil and I would be a pallid barrier for her any time she wanted me to.

Frenchy was to school today, and when the teacher found out about his reason for being out last week, she sniffed a couple of times and said that buying his clothes for a week didn't seem to quite be a success. She said it seemed to her that if they had buried the boy in the clothes and left them buried longer it might have been better. I asked her what women would do for men if all the boys got buried, and she said they'd be able to dig one up somewhere. She was smiling with her eyes.

And John Andrew back to his pocket. He had deposited the five thousand to his credit, rather than take it in cash; after buying his ticket, and leaving some money with Kato, he had several hundred with him. Five thousand dollars, which must be made ten thousand dollars. How? John Andrew tried to think what the men he knew would have done to double the money; what was aside from a poker game, not forbidden, according to Craig, or playing the market, could it be done? Kellors was honest, he admitted, as he lay in his berth, that he had no objection to either method save the insecurity of it. His father's idea as to see if John Andrew had enough ingenuity to meet such a situation, but to meet it honestly. If it was a question of real sound judgment, the "confidence" "30 days" in which to double the money would have been left out. Thinking it over, Kellors knew in some measure what that it was one of two things for him: luck and accident, or sharp decision on a long and accidental chance. Spaciousness and sobriety, in a case like this, could not count, and would be insufficient.

Well and good; if it were luck, why not follow the only sign he had ever seen? As he decided, he felt a little happier. What a good short Anne had been in the corridor! Was he really going to meet him for breakfast. Better not take a chance with meanness, this time of the year. Grapefruit. An asparagus tip, omelette, if they had fresh white asparagus. Rolls rather than toast. Anne with the coffee pot and sugar and cream, instead of the waiter pouring and preparing the fragrant cups. . . . Chickety-chickety-chickety.

Love's Reawakening

The Story of a Wife's Triumph Over Jealousy

BY ADRIAN GARRISON

Madge tells of Robert Savarin's Last Gift to Lillian

I DID not want to see what Robert Savarin would make of the episode "Madge's Love," which the younger boy had buried at his side. He had buried it, I thought, which made me stop between them and put a hand upon each shoulder. "Steady! William!" I told the older boy, wishing to bring him to the memory of the promise he had volunteered the night before, "to straighten out" his brother if they made trouble for me. "This isn't the way to help me."

My fingers were tightened upon Henry's arm so that he could not move without jerking roughly away from me, so I did not look at him but turned my gaze full upon the angry face of his elder brother. All my sympathies were with William, and it had not been for the momentary necessity of getting the boys out of the way before Lillian and Harry should reach us. I am afraid I might have permitted William to deal with his younger brother as he evidently was longing to do.

William's face darkened, then, as he and his white face crimsoned. "I'm sorry, Aunt Madge," he said, "but that word just made me sick. It isn't the first time," he broke off abruptly, then rushed into more rapid speech. "I'm not a sissy, nor like a girl either. Aren't there plenty of men, regular men, who don't like to kill things or see them killed?"

Scolding the quartet

"Marry, marry, marry!" I told him promptly, "just as there are many kind-hearted men, who like to go hunting. They do not like to see any thing suffer, but they reason that they shoot so with the animals or birds, are killed instantly. But remember this:

both of you," I swung Henry around so that he also faced me. "Kindness and tenderness are two of the best qualities any man can have. They are compelled to do. Sometimes, if you haven't already, you will read a wonderful poem which concludes: 'The bravest are the tenderest, the loving are the daring.'"

Henry's eyes, unlike William's, had not met mine. But at the last words he lifted them and looked at me, equally, though a bit shamefacedly. "I know that," he said. "We had it in school."

He was still very much the small boy, I told myself, repressing a smile at his ingratitude so like my own much younger son's in diverting a conversation embarrassing to him. But just now, I was glad to take advantage of his adroitness, for a quick glance had told me that my husband and Lillian were almost at the crest of the hill.

The Message

"Then I hope you'll always be able to remember it," I told him, added hastily. "Now, boys, I'm not going to say anything more about this. But I want your promise not to quarrel or to say anything to irritate each other, at least until I get back to the farm-house. I want to talk to your uncle, Lillian and Mr. Underwood, for a minute or two, and I want you to go on ahead down to the farmhouse. Have I your promise?"

Harmon's face for the purpose of studying "You bet," William responded promptly, and Henry's "sure thing" was but an instant delayed.

"Thank you," I answered. "When you get down, give your rabbits to me. I'll take care of them for you until your uncle comes and you decide what you want to do with them. And we want to cook 'em and eat 'em," Henry said with a ludicrous little swagger but William was silent. "I'm sure you'll be able to manage that," I said smiling. "Now, off with you!"

They turned and hurried off just as my husband and Lillian came within speaking distance. The faces of both men were grave, but Dick's eyes had a mocking sardonic expression which I knew and dreaded.

"Yes, old dear," he said. "I see you've been the sort of discretion and harbored the 'little pitchers' of the big ones, rather. Now spill us the beans. What was in the big box from that fossilized old nanny-goat, Savarin? I thought he was safely parked among the daisy roots, long as. When did they dig him up?"

The letter of Robert Savarin's in my hand might have been a living thing, so clearly did its anguished words come to me. I looked at my husband steadily.

"You will be sorry for that speech, Dick," I said, "when I tell you that Robert Savarin is very near death, and has sent a very wonderful portrait of Marion to Lillian with his wishes for her future happiness."

For an instant both men's faces showed shocked contrition. Then Dick's hardened.

"That's just about the thing I'd expect him to pull," he said wrathfully. "Something is upset till just as I don't care if he is dying. I call it a sorry trick."

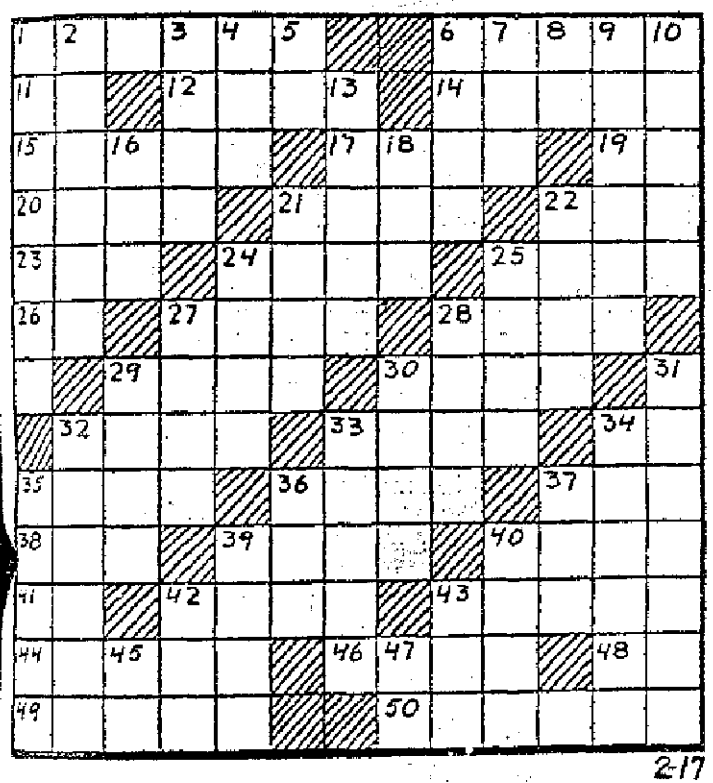

But Harry Underwood looked at the letter in my hand with sudden comprehension.

"How about it, Lady Fair?" he said. "Have you a message for me from Lil?"

An English street had estimated that 4,000,000 bottles of medicine are wasted annually because the average trapezoid holds more than the usual dose.

Excuse a man seems here to understand explanations that are embarrassing. Women who have learned of Midol avoid these unpleasant experiences!

Midol is not a narcotic; but it does banish the suffering which too often attends the menstrual period. It acts quite harmlessly, but effectively, on the organs affected. Safe, but swift; complete comfort comes in five to seven minutes. You will get this relief regardless of how hard a time you've always had. These wonderful tablets do nothing to hinder the normal, natural process of menstruation, so the only common sense to use them.

If you would spare yourself all suffering at this time, get Midol in a trim little case of aluminum for purse or pocket. Fifty cents at any drug store.

Modern beauty culture has been making tremendous strides—today, it has become a science practiced by specialists whose sole task is to safeguard and accent beauty.

DURING recent years, beauty science has been so highly developed by the experts in this comparatively new profession that every woman can now make the most of her natural loveliness.

Laboratories are workrooms for research. Schools of beauty culture have been developed to teach workers not only the methods of perfecting external beauty, but also laws affecting good health.

Today—to add that finish, that perfection of grooming, which distinguishes the truly fastidious woman from her less particular sisters—a certain professional touch is needed. The deft, well-trained, skillful touch of the beauty expert.

Since Cleopatra's time

The quest for beauty is not new. Neither is the science of beauty culture. Both began when history began. But in more recent years we have had greater leisure, more time for perfecting ourselves, less need for the crude, heavy makeups of pioneer days.

And we have turned, naturally enough, to those whose experience qualifies them to help us—the beauty specialists.

Your beauty expert applies, to your individual case, the methods best suited to bring out your own natural loveliness.

Go to Paris, home of beauty in all its forms; or to Rome, Madrid,

London, Berlin, Budapest, Vienna! Wherever you travel—either here in the United States or abroad—you will seek out experts to help protect and revitalize your good looks.

Throughout the world

And it is therefore particularly interesting that more than 19,000 of these experts today recommend Palmolive Soap. What a remarkable tribute to the purity, the blandness, the delicacy, of this vegetable oil soap . . . which is based on an age-old formula combining palm and olive oils for beauty cleansing!

Palmolive does not—not would anyone claim that it did—make all other beauty care unnecessary. It aids your beauty specialist by providing the finest natural skin cleanser, the greatest day-in-and-day-out safeguard for facial beauty. Its thorough, gentle cleansing, of course, makes the work of the beauty specialist easier.

And it is, for the same reason, an ideal bath soap. That is one of many reasons why 19,813 world-famous beauty experts recommend it . . . why they write to urge "foundation cleansing by one means and one only—the twice daily use of Palmolive Soap."
